ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a network monitoring system according, first, a data acquisition section acquires a plurality of packets flowing on a network. Then, a data analysis section acquires action explanation information for explaining a single action from the plural packets acquired by the data acquisition section. Then, a display-information generation section displays the single action on the network on the single screen based on the action explanation information acquired by this data analysis section.